Chulu East Peak Climbing is an adventurous venture in the Annapurna region. Located in the Manang Valley, Chulu East Peak (6,584 m) is a higher peak to climb than the Chulu West Peak (6,419 m). This peak was first scaled in 1955 by a German Expedition Team. Climbing Chulu East Peak can be technically difficult for the beginner climbers, therefore basic knowledge of climbing is needed.

To be more specific about the location of this peak, it is situated in the large Damodar Himal. The easter limit runs south from Chako, whereas Peak 6687 is in a north-to-south direction along the Hunlung Khola, Nar Khola, and Phu Khola. The south side of this peak is bounded by the Marsyangdi Khola & Mesokanto La, whereas the west side comprises Kali Gandaki and north holds Parchekya La. All together there are four summits in the Chulu range. Each two of them can be summited on the permits of Chulu West and Chulu East.
